ADVANCE IN WAGES.

Ten Per Cen: Increase Given Carnegie Employes.

25,000 MEN ARE MADE HAPPY.

The Company's Nine Big Plants Effected By the Raise-The Present Rusiness Outlook Justifies the Increase-Other Manufacturers Likely to Follow.

PITTSBURG, May 15.—The Carnegie company has raised the wages of the 25,000 employes of its different mills 10 per cent, to go into effect June 1.

The plants in which the new scale goes int, effect are: Edgar Thomson and the militia will remain all summer furnaces, Edgar Thomson steel works, Duquesne steel works, Homestead s'eel works, Lucy furnaces, Keystone bridge works, Upper Union mills, Lower Union mills, Beaver Falls mills. In their notices the company says that the present outlook justifies more wages. Now that the Carnegie company bas taken the step with the many other manufacturers who are running nonunion plants, it is likely a large number of other manufacturers who have not as yet granted advances to their workmen, will be forced to do so.

The acknowledgement of the company that prices warrant such an advance is taken for much in the business world, and a general stiffening of prices in the many lines of steel manufacturers by this company is looked for at an early date. SEVEN MEN KILLED.

ENGLAND GETTING UGLY. She Refuses to Carry Out Certain Bering

Sea Regulations. WASHINGTON, May 15.—An ugly crisis has been reached in the negotiations between the United States and Great Britain, looking to the adoption of uniform regulations for the government of the seal fisheries this season. The British government positively refuses THE SECRETARY'S SIDE OF 1T. to re-enact the regulation of last year, which prohibits the carrying of firearms by sealing vessels through the zone north of the thirty-fifth parallel during the closed season. The United States officials look upon this as disastrous to the seal fisheries, holding that the result will be to relieve the pelagic sealers of the only restriction, which has operated to prevent an unlimited slaughter of the herds. While killing by firearms remains illegal, it is realized that it will be impossible to enforce this prohibition if arms can be freely carried, for the sealers would kill freely unless they should happen to be under the very eye of a revenue cutter. Meanwhile, the United States cutters have gone out under the old instructions to seize all vessels car rying arms not under seal. These must be modified speedily by orders sent through the Alaska Commercial company's steamer, which leaves San Francisco in a day or two, or else there may be another big claim for damages on account of illegal seizures filed by the British government. The attitude of the latter is viewed with much dissatisfaction at the state department, where it is regarded as an evidence of unwarrantable concession to the Canadian pelagic sealers. also held that the effect of the British action is to practically nullify all measure of protection for the seals that was conferred by the Paris arbitration, and it would not be surprising if this course is persisted in, if it resulted in a declaration by the United States of the abrogation of the treaty.

Herbert Says He Has Refused to Explain.

The Admiral Didn't Like an Order Re-Garding the Disposition of Certain Vessels—Then He Resigned Before a Change Could Be Made.

Washington, May 15. - Secretary Herbert, in response to inquiries, has dictated the following official statement concerning Admiral Meade: "At the navy department it is learned that the department had addressed a letter to Admiral Meade, complicity in the attempt to murder stating that it desired to know if he William A. the questions.

"The facts in relation to the failure of the department to grant Admiral Meade's request to have the Cincinnati ordered to the New York yard instead of the Norfolk yard are that this vessel was ordered to go to the Norfolk navy. yard for some necessary repairs. This was done upon the recommendation of the chief constructor, who desired that work, which is now scarce at both yards, might be equalized b tween the Norfolk and Brooklyu yards. Admiral Meade, who had selected the Cincinnati for his flagship during the absence of the New York, was thereupon ordered to hoist his flag upon that vessel upon her arrival at Norfolk, in the interim hoisting his flag on the Minneapolis. "He afterward forwarded a second request to the department to have the Cincinnati ordered to New York instead of to Norfolk. On the day when this later request was received, Secretary Herbert was not in the department at any time. Assistant Secretary McAdoo being in charge did not act upon the request, as he did not think it proper to H. Clark, W. J. Poyser, S. S. Kurtz, W. H. Smith, O. M. Coxen, J. F. T. The Two Governments Have About Reached an Understanding.

OTTAWA, May 15.-It is stated on anparently good authority that'the Dominion and Manitoba governments have almost arrived at an understanding on the Manitoba school question. Premier Greenway and Attorney General Sifton of Manitoba will arrive in Ottowa in a few days to consult with Premier Bowell, Sir Charles H. Tupper, the minister of justice, and Lord Aberdeen.

Manitoba, it is stated, will not object to allowing Roman Catholics the privilege of establishing separate schools while paying for them out of taxes of Catholics. Archbishop Langevin of St. Boniface, Man., insists that the Sisters of Charity be allowed to teach in these school- without passing teachers' examinations. To this no ther the Manitoba nor Dominion government is likely to consent. It is probable that a compromise will be effected.

In the trial of Sarah Snell today, for Mackey was the first witness. His tesciled with Mrs Snell, his wife got some of her property, and he proposes to shield his mother-in-law as far as he can. Concerning all that he testified to at the former trials about the conduct of Wiggins and Mrs. Snell and the incidents on which the alleged conspiracy are based, he says he has no recollection now, and does not believe he so testified. This weakens the state's case. The defense outlined in the statement to the jury amounts to a claim that Wiggins controlled Mrs. Snell, and secured such of her personal property and power of attorney as to give him control of the real estate. The attorney claimed that Mrs. Snell was to Wiggins like clay in the potter's hand; that he controlled her will and conduct to an alarming extent, and that when he learned that Mackey's insurance policy was payable to Mrs. Snell he hired the assassin, fully expecting to get the money, or most of it, as soon as Mrs. Snell had it.

Et Informs Mrs. Bowser That He Has Ctm. sulted a Fortune Teller With a Remarkable Result—Then the Pin Turns Up and Bower Gets Mad.

[Copyright, 1995, by Charles B. Lewis.] After Mr. Bowser had made a pretense of reading for half an hour after dinner the other evening, and after Mrs. Bowsen had become certain that he had something on his mind, he looked up and remarked: "Mrs. Bowser, do you know that we have a thief in this house?" "Mercy on me, but where is he?" exclaimed Mrs. Bowser as she sprang up and looked around as if expecting to catch sight of a strange man behind some piece of furniture.

'Yes, Mrs Bowser, a thief in the house," he continued "It doesn't happen to be a he, however At 9 o'clock I shall have a very painful duty to perform, but I shall not hesitate to do it. I have been robbed by Laura, the second girl. I shall confront her with the proofs of her crime and then call an officer to conduct her to the station.

There was no time to warn him. Ten seconds after his appear ance the blast went off, and old Jim was last seen clawing around among the clouds. It was taken for granted that he was lead. Some said his mortal remains might be found at the bottom of Red Horse ravine, but we figured that there would be so few of them that it wouldn't pay to go down and hold a funeral. For an hour or two everybody said he was sorry and hoped that our loss was old Jim's gain, and then things went on as before.

Four days went by, and just as we were eating supper semething came over the hill and down the trail. As it came nearer we made out that it was a human being. As it reached camp we discovered that it was old Jim Wakely Hair, evebrows and whiskers were singed off, he was barefooted and almost naked, and one side of his face was black as ink from the powder. He had sailed away to the bottom of Red Horse ravine, alighted in a tree top, and had been four days getting out and back to us. Of course everybody got up and cheered and rushed to shake hands, but ld Jim wayed us all aside and said:

"In course, you all know that I was h'isted by the blast. You jest banked on it that I was scattered to the four winds. Elder Watkins, did the boys do any s'archin

No Sympathy Deserved by the Residents of Lone Pine.

BANK FAILURE.-Last Saturday afternoon the citizens of Lone Pine were thrown into a state of panic at discovering that Young a bank had closed its doors, and that Mr Young, accompanied by a satchel and the funds of the bank, had gone on a trip to Utah or New Mexico. The town, which has a population of 850 people, was left with only about 90 cents in circulation, and within an hour 85 cents of this sum was in the tills of the saloon keepers. Posses were started out in different directions, but the banker had a long start and maintained it. An indignation meeting was held Saturday night; but, except being indignant and wanting to shoot somebody, nothing was accomplished. As near as can be learned, Mr. Young got awa, with about $9,000, a portion of which was rity funds, and the town and its people are practically bankrupt.

COUNTED OUT OUR CASH.

Although we have a large list of subscribers in Lone Pine, we cannot extend our sympathies. All of two months age there were rumors to the discredit of the bank. We had $300 on deposit over there and one day walked into the institution to check it out. Mr. Young blandly informed us that he was busy with his books and asked us to call again. When we insisted on checking out, he said the bank had sue pended payment. Nevertheless when our two guns got the range of the banker he humbly and subserviently counted out out cash and observed that he felt it a pleasure to do business with a born financier. We dropped a hint to various people, but they neither called for an examination of the books and the cash nor picketed the roads to prevent Mr. Young from changing climates. The banking institution in this town is, we are glad to say, as sound as a nut. A committee of our citizens visit the bank every Saturday afternoon to see how things tally, and the banker was long ago satisfied that he couldn't get out of the county ahead of his depositors even if he had wings. We are wild and woolly in this section, but we are on to most of the banking tricks and other little games.

REORGANIZED. -- Monday evening, socording to notice published last week, a public meeting was held to reorganize the vigilance committee and put it in good working order again. Twelve of our leading citizens volunteered to serve for one year, and from among them were elected a president, secretary and treasurer. For the ast eight months not a man has been hung in this town, and during the last four not a warning notice has been sent out. The result is just what might have been looked for. Our town has again become the headquarters of bad men, and there is a general disposition to override law and order. At the meeting referred to we handed in the following list of persons who would make good hanging material: Arizona Bob, Kansas Bill, Thunderbolt Sam, Mormon Jack, Rattlesnake Bill, Bowle Knife Jones, Rip Snorter Green and Grizzly Hank. Mr. Fowler, president of the committee, assures us that the case of each and every one of these individuals will be promptly attended to, and in case of all hangings we shall be on hand, as heretofore, to record confessions and last wishes and make things as pleasant as possible.

the leading citizens of Pine Hill have been anxious for us to come over and make a public speech in favor of the railroad question. Tuesday afternoon we rode over and received a warm welcome, and at 8 o'clock in the evening we took the platform in the town hall and began speaking to a crowd of about 400 yeomen. We are still a good deal mixed up as to what that crowd expected of us. From what we could gather some of them supposed we were going to read a poem on Napoleon, others wanted to know what about Christopher Columbus, others yet demanded a political speech, and the gentlemen on the back row of benches stood up and cheered for high license and a better brand of whisky. We were naturally more or less embarrassed—more, we think When we thought we knew what the assembled multitude wanted, we tried to give it to them, but we frankly admit that our efforts were a fail-We had come there to submit facts and figures on the benefits of a railroad to Pine Hill, but we were not permitted to give them.

SOMEWHAT MIXED. -For a month past

We did make something of a hit by itching off the railrow bringing up the question of admitting Arizona to statehood, but the crowd soon grew weary and showed its displeasure in the usual way. We don't suppose that any fur my mangled remains."

"Well, no," drawled the elder. "We didn't calkerlate we could find anything were intended for our private use, but still were intended for our private use, but still were intended for our private use. we felt somewhat aggrieved at having to disappear through a hole in the platform and creep from under the building on hands and knees. There was so much enthuslasm that a number of men mounted their cayuses and followed us two or three miles on our way home, and those left behind wrocked the hall before they left it. None of the Pine Hillers has been over here to explain things to us, and, as we said before, we feel considerably mixed up. Two weeks ago we won all the money in the town on a single hand of poker, and it was a bluffing hand at that, and last week we cut off 38 subscribers who were in arrears, and perhaps those things had some effect on the crowd. Be it as it may, we got home alive and right side up, and if Pine Hill wants a railroad she'll have to get it without any help from us. As a western man from head to heel we rather know the western audience and can cheerfully accord it the utmost latitude, but there is a limit even to enthusiasm, and that limit was reached when we had to drop into a hole and go crawling around over oyster cans and beer bottles to escape the enthusiastic demonstrations in waiting M. FANCIES OF FASHION.

SLEEVES STILL CONTINUE TO BE FEARFUL AND WONDERFUL

Popularity of Full Fancy Veste-Surpits ing Combinations of Color-New Collars, Cuth and Necktice—The Infinite Variety of New Hote and Honnets.

[Special Correspondence.] NEW YORK, May & -Sleeves continue to cut a very large figure, literally and metaphorically, in the fashionable world, and while a few modistes really try to reduce their size others again inflate them to the utmost. Some of them are actually stuffed with horsehair or some heavy jet. This cape was of leather colother stiff material. There are some with drooping puffs, with caps at the top made very stiff and calculated to hold down the gathers. One pretty sleeve was made with three shirred puffs, the upper one being quite deep, and over this a scalloped cap, just the size of the arm. The fore part of the sleeve had a double puffing and a little fancy braiding in silver, like that on the caps. The lighter the material the fuller the sleeve is made. One fancy sleeve to a light taffeta gown was made in one wide balloon puff, and this was raised in three festoons under narrow velvet ribbon, with three flat rosettes at the junction of the silk with the perforated crepon sleeve. On the top was a full bow with bat wing ends.

I think I never saw such surprising combinations of color as there are now. Salmon and old rose are put with the most briliant purple, and purple and old gold, maize and green are seen everywhere. Blue and prune, blue and pink, scarlet, and green are all seen this seagether, and scarlet and dark blue. So are crimson and French gray.

The yoke and plastron in front were one mass of garish gilt tinsel, with rows of silver and copper spangles set along the center of the patlars made of white lace cut in deep vaning outlined with silver and gilt spangles. The effect was not fine, but many wife of Louis XII.

persons appeared to admire it. I noticed one very neat and genteel caps. It was of fine black broadcloth and had a secand cape over it which fastened under the collar and could be removed if necessary. The collar turned down and was bound with silk braid. The adjustable collar was slashed in the middle of the back, and that and the lower part had three rows of black silk braid each, sewed on by hand. The rest was tailor finished. Some of these little capes are so wide and lined so stiffly that they stand out far wider than the sleeves. One that was made in this manner was short and were set fussy little resettes. The collar was made of a series of loops of ribbon, and there were two loops with piquets of ored cloth, and the ribbon was of the same shade.

The new collars and cuffs for summer wear are made of white linen and are deep and have square corners. Some of the collars have one ruffle of lace or embroidery around the edge, and others have a ruffle in the middle. Many are of striped gingham percale or pique, in bright stripes. I have seen none simply figured. These collars and cuffs are for mountain, seaside and morning summer wear. A friend of mine bought today a duck suit of dark blue with pinhead points of white. With this she will wear blue and white striped collars and cuffs, and a white embroidered muslin necktie, and a white sailor hat with blue and white striped ribbon and a blue wing. Hats and bonnets fill my waking hours with anxious thought. They are simply indescribable. High, wide flyaway effects are seen. Viking, swallow and bat wing fancies, Dutch bonnets. son. JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS. The Author of "Uncle Remus" Home in Atlanta. [Special Correspondence.]

ATLANTA, May 6, - Joel Chandler Harris. Jr., or "J. C." as he is called, has just passed his eighth birthday. He is a sturdy little chap, not unlike his father in many ways. Mr. Harris has always promised his son that he could have his first big dinner on this birthday; also that he would stay at home and share it with him. At first it was thought only to have the small companions of our young friend, but Mrs. Harris kept adding to her list and decided to give a luncheon to the growing folks at 1 and a children's party later.

The Harris home is situated at West End, Atlanta's suburb, and might be called a country home in the city. There are acres and acres of ground, all laid off in terraces, flower beds, trees of all descriptions and a fine vegetable garden. Mr. Harris has never got over his fondness for the country and will not part with an inch of his ground, nor does he like to do away with any of the trees. At present, the home is like spring itself, with the green leaves and shrubbery, balmy air and the thousands of birds that flit from bough to bough.

Mr. Joel Chandler Harris is a shy man, as the world knows. When the International League of Clubs met in Atlanta, many of the delegates had a great curiosity to meet and see Mr. Harris. But they came away disappointed. Not one convention did he attend, and few were the people introduced. Several of them went to his office and came upon him unawares. They introduced themselves or were introduced and were kindly invited to sit down.

'Just have a chair. I'll soon be through," said Mr. Harris. The visitor accepted the invitation. Time passed. Mr. Harris continued writing. The vis-

When patience had ceased to be a virtue and an intuition told the stranger to wait no longer, then did he make a move. "Oh, are you going?" asked Mr. Harris, looking up, surprised. "Come, sir, to see me again. Am sorry I am so not to return.

Mr. Harris wore his Sunday clothes to the office Tuesday, so there would be no time lost in dressing when he came back at 12:30. He did not get off, as is his custom, in front of the house, but rode to the end of the block and came in by a side gate. Mrs. Harris had well played her part of hostess, and most of the guests had arrived. All were asking for Mr. Harris.

"It would be just like him not to come in. I know him so well," remarked a gentleman. "It's a surprise to me he ever consented to be present."

"Well, he couldn't very well get out of it," laughed Mrs. Harris. "He's been promising J. C. so long, and he believes in keeping his word with the children. If you will excuse me, I'll go and see if his car is coming."

The car had come from town and gone back again, so the servant told Mrs. Harris. She walked out to the dining room, and there on the veranda sat the

"Why, Mr. Harris, isn't this a nice way for a host to be? How long have you been here and come into the parlor right away!" she said to him.

"Oh, Lord, no," answered he. "I'm not going in there. They'll think I'm detained down town. I'm enjoying this game now and the boys can't give me up. (He was watching two or three little fellows at their game of marbles.) I'm the umpire. No, I'm not going to stir from here. see them. The Harris table is naturally a long one. There are five children, but it had been extended almost twice the length to accommodate the guests invited. When the guests were seated, all but Mr. Harris had something to say. He sat as meek as a mouse, not venturing to put in the smallest share to the conversation.

He seemed to enjoy the talk of others, but not once did he comment on what they were saying. With him, it was the silvery silence. He occasionally remarked to the lady next to him: "This is mighty good. What do you reckon it is?" Or: "This is the first time I ever ate anything like this. You know I don't go in society, and my wife has never been used to this kind of cooking and wouldn't know from Adam how to fix it. I wish we had birthday lunches

At 3 o'clock the guests took their departure to make room for the little folks just coming in. I forgot to say that J.

Poor Role Assigned to Her. Laura Burt is one of the most fortunate young comediennes on the American stage, in that most of the plays with which the has been identified during the last few years have been extraordinary successes. and her role has happened to be the best in each of the pieces. She was first enabled to get something of a reputation by her work as June in "Blue Jeans," which is generally conceded to be the best ingenue part ever put into a melodrama. Then she had Madge in "In Old Kentucky," in which no one has ever failed, and now she is with "Linsey Woolsey," a hypnotic melodrama by Joseph Arthur, author of "Blue Jeans," "The Still Alarm" and the never to be forgotten "Corn Cracker," which was so comically pathetic and pathetically cómical Almost every one agrees that Miss Burt has scored another hit in "Linsey Woolsey," although it is also said that to have done anything else would have been next to impossible.

It should not be supposed that Miss Burt is devoid of ability. She has lots of it and is easily one of the best actresses in her line on the American stage, but her extraordinary luck in having had very good parts in very successful plays is a matter of frequent comment in theatrical circles. She is said to be meditating a starring tour to begin in the fall of 1896. Laura Burt was born in a little town in the isle of Man. Her father was an Englishman and her mother a Welshwoman of good family. The first few years of her life were spent in a small village with an unpronounceable name in her mother's native land. When about 10 or 12 years of age, her parents came to America, and she of course with them. They settled in Illinois, from which locality Miss Burt went to Cincinnati to live with relatives.

The Hanlons first discovered her great ability and employed her for several seabusy today." And so the visitor left sons as Fantasma, and her great woman's rights speech introduced in one scene of ers' habits and characteristics as a Yale membered. Her next engagement was as June in "Blue Jeans."

Tricky Medinger's Violent Death.

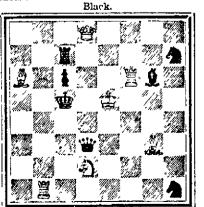

Medinger, the French racing man, who vas recently shot and killed by his jealous wife, who promptly killed berself, was one of the oldest and at the same time tricklest of the French professionals. He was the hero of many long and hard fought battles on the track and was notorious as a foul rider. In June of last year at the Buffalo track he openly crowded Harry Wheeler against the rail and thereby won the race. He was loudly hissed by the 7,000 or 8,000 spectators and disqualified. Medinger and Wheeler afterward nearly came to blows and were anything but friends up to the present time. A year preceding this he received a long disqualification for punching an official at the Seine track, says The Wheel.

CAYLOR'S BALL GOSSIP

How Cornelius Magillicuddy Became Plain Connie Mack.

THE PITTSBURG BOY AS A LION.

What Will They Say Later?-Sunday Playing by Eastern Clubs Is Doomed and an Eight Club Circuit Will Follow.

Cornelius Magillicuddy is the man of the hour. You don't know him? Never heard of him? Oh, yes, you did—by abbreviation. Cornelius Magillleuddy is the elongated legal title by which he is known to his family. It is the name which is recorded on Lis line in the family Bible. But life at its longest is short, and no man should be blamed for trying to save a few years by chopping down such a name. Mr. Magillicuddy did. He trimmed it after the manner in which the Kentackian cut off the tail of his dogclose up to the cars—and when he finished the job the name was Connie Mack.

Now you recognize him. He is the manager of the Pittsburg Paseball club which took the lead in the National league race. That is where Mr. Mack acquired his meteoric fame. In a few weeks' time he went up to the head and stood, as I said, the hero of the hour. The mikado, Li Hung Chang, Grover Cleveland, Anson-all went out before Mr. Mack's effulgent light. Such is baseball fame. Six months hence the Pittsburg manager may not have a hook on which to hang his now splendid mantle. Nothing succeeds like success, especially in baseball, and in Pittsburg they stop and gaze at Connie as he walks along the street and murmur to one another, "How can one slim, skinny man know so much about basehall playing?" What they will say about him next fall if they see him no one knows. I am reminded of an experience of my own in that line which induces me not to place too much dependence on Mack's present fame. In 1887 the late Robert Ferguson had the management of that most eccentric collection of baseball players ever called a team—the Metropolitans. Erasowned them, and no white elephant ever cost its owner more worry and money, to say nothing of hay. Ferguson was an old hall player who knew the game and playman knows his Latin yorks. But w his baseball crudition Bob could make nothing out of the "Mets," and they lost the first 14 games played.

In June Ferguson gave up and resigned the management. I happened to be at leisure at the time, and Wiman concluded I was just the man for the vacant position. It was a queer selection. I knew as little about the business as Ferguson knew a great deal. But I have always been willing to try. It's a good motto. So when this Augean task was placed before me I promised to see what could be done. All did was to make a personal appeal to the players, who, by the way, were the greatest collection of good players with had dispositions that ever got into a team. The appeal went bone. They decided to 'play ball," and they did. We had 23 successive games to play on the home grounds. and they won 19 of them.

Then we started west for a series of 16 games. Many a man has lost his reputation while away from home. On the night of the exodus I stood in the ferryhouse at Cortlandt street, New York, waiting for a boat to take us over to the train in Jersey City. The 'Mets' were scattered around with their bat bags and baggage As I stood alone a gentleman addressed me and asked if I knew what team it was. I told him, with some pride, that it was the "Mets." "Indeed!" said he. "What a great game they have played since that new manager took charge. He must be a wonder." "He is," was my warm indorsement. "Do you know him?" inquired the stranger. "I-er-hem-have seen him," was my saving reply. Just then the gates opened, and we went out into the night

Three weeks later I came back and passed through that same ferryhouse. Instinctively my eyes glanced around with a fearful trepidation lest they should rest upon that inquisitive stranger. He was the last man on earth I want d to meet again, for of the 16 games played since I indersed his good opinion of the "Mets" manager we had lost all but one and our baggage. So as I recall this personal experience I am forced to discount Manager Mack's fame. A month hence he may be off the pedestal, and another may be in his place. It may be Davis, Tebeau, Seele, Hanlon or Foutz. Who can tell?

In a recent interview at Cincinnati Mack gave me the credit for discovering and making public his real unabridged name, which, honest Injun, is Cornelius Magillicuddy. He says I owned a newspaper at Carthage, Mo., in 1889, which I sold to his cousins from Illinois; that his cousins told me his legal name, and that I came east soon after and published it to the world That will do for an explanation, but his cousins did not put me on. What's in a name anyhow? It is his first season as a manager, and if he keeps up his suc-cess to the end it will not be Dennis nor

Keep your eyes on the National league. Sunday playing in its ranks is doomed. Next year neither the Brooklyne nor Baltimores will play Sunday games in the west, and the Chicagos will close their gates on that day. This is not a guess. Stick a pin in it. The result will be that the Sunday playing cities of the west-Cincinnati, St. Louis and Louisville-will be left with no aid except it be from the Washingtons. Then will come the return to an eight club circuit, for neither St. Louis nor Louisville can exist without the revenues from Sunday games.

In the National league race so far run what I foresaw before the season opened has come to pass. Nearly every team is weak in the pitching department. Baltimore, Philadelphia and Boston have par-ticularly suffered in that point. The Phillies are in a lamentable hole, and in spite of the champions' great work at bas and in the field they are heavily handicapped "in the box." And New York is looming up strong where the rest are weak. Meekin and Rusie are trotting in a class of their own. If they can keep it up, the Giants are going to be dangerous. Mean-while Cleveland, after a bad start, has done well, and Brooklyn and Pittsburg are not disappointed with their representatives. But the season is quite young, and baseball is mighty uncertain. O. P. CAYLOR.

August A. Hansen of Minneapolis, the holder of the American individual mileage record of 21,053 miles for 1894, recently rode a century in 6 hours 25 minutes.

The course of the Chicago road race, which is to be run on Decoration day, is 18 miles 4,056 feet in length. A handicap time limit of 12 minutes is allowed.

PLUNGER MIKE DWYER.

He Wins and Loses Thousands With the Stoicism of an Indian.

Michael F. Dwyer, the famous American horseman and plunger, who, together with Richard Croker, the ex-leader of Tammany Hall, is tempting fortune on English tracks, is, with the possible exception of Riley Grannan, the most daring bettor on the races the American turf knows. Messrs. Dwyer and Croker are said to have lost $30,000 in a single day on one of the English tracks, but as they are also reported to have won $100,000 on the victory of Eau Gallie, formerly Utica, they seem to be still well ahead of the game. For some years prior to 1876 Philip and Michael Dwyer were butchers in Brooklyn, but in the centennial year they began to attract attention on the turf with Rhadamanthus, a black sprinter. The brothers remained in partnership 14 years, and when they separated because of Mike's daring plunges each had $1,000,000 as his share of the money their stable had Philip has continued his conservative course, but Mike is as great a plunger as ever. He owns a stable of horses worth easily $150,000, is chief owner of the New Jersey Jockey club grounds, is a large shareholder in the Gravesend track, owns a hotel on the Indian river. Florida, where he spends the winter months and has other possessions. All this his horses or his pluck as a better won for him in 18 years. and put up $135,000 to do it. There is one feature of Dwyer's betting which is quite unusual. He prefers to bet on a horse when the odds are so ridioulously small that most people would refrain from sheer disgust. He has been known to bet $20,000 frequently to win $3,000. He is said to have bet $60,000 to win $6,000 in a race between Joe Cotton and Binette at Sheepshead Bay in 1887. In the same year he bet $30,000 against $8,000 on Hanover, and in 1886 be bet $25,000 against $5,000 on Tremont. Personally Dwyer very seldom enters the betting ring at the race track during the running of the races. He has trusted commistioners to whom he gives instructions. Usually they keep him posted as he sits in the grand stand, clubhouse or judges' box as to how the betting is going.

In buying horses Dwyer buys those which have won races. He paid $7,000 for Raceland at the sale of the Belmont stable, and the old golding won over $70;-000 for him before he died. Potomac and Don Alonzo cost him $50,000, yet they naid for themselves within a year, and Luke Blackburn won hun hamense sums. The heaviest winning ever made by the Dwyer stable was in Tremont's year, when they won $208,169 In addition to this Mike Dwyer won about $100,000 in beta. In victory or defeat he is calm and collected, never giving way either to disappointment or exultation. A friend once met Dwyer after a most disastrous day at the races. He smiled as he said. 'It was a pretty bad day. I dien't win a bet." It was said that his losses aggregated $35,-000 on that day

PROTECTION AGAINST CUTWORMS.

Remedial Measures Are Clean Culture, Fall Plowing, Insecticide Fertilizers, Etc.

The presence of cutworms in a field becomes noticeable immediately after a crop has been set out, whether sweet potatoes, cabbages, tomatoes or whatever else it may be, or soon after the seed has sprouted, be it corn, onions or other vegetables. All over the field plants have disappeared or have fallen. Investigation will show that they have been cut or eaten off at the surface or even a little below it. In the cornfield they cut off the plants almost as fast as they come above ground, and white potatoes occasionally suffer as severely. Normally the insects are grass feeders or feeders upon low, succulent vegetation and in grass or clover lands, therefore, or in masses of rank vegetation generally, the moth lays her eggs. Other things equal, clover or sod land will be most likely to be infested by cutworms, while land cultivated late is most likely to be

With other memedial measures suggested in a bulletin from the New Jersey station are clover culture and early fall plowing. It is important that the plowing is done early. But when land has been wintered with an infested sod covering it and is plowed in the early spring the farmer is not quite helpless, according to the bulletin quoted. If the land is to be put into crops, prepare as usual and apply all the potash and nitrogen in the form of kainit and nitrate of soda as a top dressing. Delay seeding until rain or natural moisture has dissolved and carried down the fertilizers. Phosphates may be applied at any time, as these have no insecticide properties. This practice will, as a rule, protect the corn crop.

In crops like sweet potatoes a different method is indicated, the poisoned bait remedy being the best. This is simply providing the cutworms with poisoned food after the soil is prepared for planting. The easiest plan is to spray a rank patch of clover with one of the arsenites used at the rate of a pound in 100 gallons of water, and as soon as it has of two of the busiest thoroughfares in to feel at first a sort of languor and listsomewhat dried cut it close to the Chicago, if not in the entire country, is pelled to bring into play all the strength ground. The Millet Crop.

Among other remarks made in regard to field grasses at a meeting of the Kansas state board of agriculture, Senator James Shearer said: The almost complete failure of common tame grasses during the last dry season sets us to casting about for a substitute. As a substitute for tame grass we find millet very good. Two tons of good hay and if thrashed 15 to 25 bushels of seed per acre is a common yield, while a crop of corn will do better after it than after corn, but we would especially recommend it for a second crop, instead of having our small grain land lying idle half the season and growing to weeds. It can be put in much better condition for a crop next season by plowing as soon as possible after the small grain is harvested and sowing with millet. Last year through dry weather and heat it hved, ready to start with the first fall showers, and just before frost one-half a ton to two tons per acre of good cattle hay was cut, leaving enough stubble on the ground to prevent soil blowing-an important item-for in many localities the drought resisting advantages of fall plowing cannot be reaped, at least on upland, for fear of soil blowing in the spring. By sowing at different times, as needed, millet will make a substitute for pasture grass passable in quality and bountiful in quantity from the first heat of summer until first frost.

Squash Vine Borer. A subscriber to Home and Farm

writes: "Some years ago I frequently found half a dozen of these disgusting worms in a single root, where they tunnel and eat and finally cause the death of the plant unless precautions were taken to cover the joints near the original root with damp soil family packed and thereby to induce the fermation of roots at the covered joints. Since I have adopted the practice of covering the soil all around the plants with the tobacco dust and bone meal puxture, frequently mentioned by me as one sure preventive of squash bug attacks, I have not had much trouble with the beier either. Cutting out and destroying the worms are often recommended but I have seliom been able to save infested plants by these means ?

A number of persons are mentioned as desirable candidates for the state senate. Representatives Rowlen and Thomas are both in the field, and many of the friends of Mr. Ralph Ambler, of Canton, have suggested his name, but without consulting him. If a capable and creditable senator is desired, no mistake would be made in selecting him. This year Stark county will undoubtedly secure the nom- their history. Mr. Julian Ralph is a nice man, but his disgust at the "red rash," as he calls it, which affects the country on holiday occasions, when the national flag is shown, will not be shared by the public generally. Mr. Ralph thinks that our cities should have municipal flags. and that the stars and stripes should be kept more in the background. He does not object to the national flag, but he holds that it can be exhibited to such an extent as to make its display monotonous. THE INDEPENDENT fears that Mr. Ralph's Americanism is in need of revision.

Now that the high water of last week has subsided and the damage has been temporarily repaired, the wish may be expressed very properly that our railroads will replace at once all such bridge structures as are in danger of destruction from causes similar to those of Friday night. The old timber bridges are doubtless safe enough under ordinary circumstances, but it is the extraordinary circumstances that the public has learned to dread. Substantial steel or iron bridges resting securely upon stone foundations would probably have withstood the flood of last week and prevented much of the loss and sorrow that will make it one long to be remembered.

The recent speech of Mr. Balfour, the British statesman, at a London banquet, expresses the value of the newspaper in quite a new way to the average reader. "The newspaper." he said, "in its capacity as an advertising agent, is, after all, of the first importance to any civilized society, inasmuch as it brings together those who have something to sell and those who have something to buy. BUSINESS OF OUR BANKS.

There is a refreshing accuracy about a national bank statement, that is far more satisfactory as an indication of business conditions than the enthusiastic or depressed outbursts of the superficial observer. The statements for the present season have just been called for and those sent to Washington by the three Massillon national banks show a stronger state of affairs than we have the boys armed with sling shots let had since May 4, 1893. The following fly the elastic, and the pebble with figures have been compiled from the published reports: DEPOSITS.

May 4, 1893, marked the period when the bank deposits, loans and discounts exceeded those of any other period in parent in the July reports of that year. Since that date there has been a gradual improvement. that has been especially noticeable since May of the present year.

OHIO AND INDIANA.

Colonel Conger's recent New York in terview has attracted the attention of the New York Sun. "The Ohio colonel." it says, "has ventured the remark that Gen. Harrison is just as much of a candidate as McKinley. In this respect, likewise, his perceptions are probably accurate. "What we note particularly, however," concludes the Sun, "is that while the Ohio men say that Harrison is just as much of a candidate as Mckinley, the Indiana men do not put it just that way. They say that it will be Harrison against Reed in the convention; the West against the East, with the Indiana ex-President representing West."

He quoted these lines from Burns, as an example of his style:

No doubt Dr. Robinson is right in comparing Riley with Burns. He will not be appreciated at his true value during his life time, because his poems are has written a poem that comes right soul in the soft spot which Burns appeals to. It is called "The Muskingum

THE WORK OF A SLING SHOT.

A Shocking Warning to Parents to Prevent the Use of a Dangerous Toy Weapon-A Bright Young Lad's Eye Sight Ruined for

"I give you lief," cried little Frank Stochr, Sunday afternoon, as he stood behind a post, shonting to some boys who were playing with sling shots near by. The youngeters did not immediately respond to the childish challenge, and the lad put his head out from the place of security to see what was going on. Just at that unfortunate moment, one of which it was loaded, struck the left eve in the too curious head, and made it sightless.

The injured child is the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel H. Stoehr, a handsome and promising little fellow, and his accident while it has grieved his parents bitterly, has also shocked the parents of many other youngsters, who weapon for a toy.

It was feared Sunday that the left eye would be permanently blind. It is now entirely useless, but Dr. Hattery entertains the hope that in time a partial rewounded member gives great pain.

Determining to retire from retail rade, Mr. Albright organized the German Deposit bank in 1872. He was as sociated with Wm. It is supposed that he left a will. His estate is quite large, the result of a life of industry and usefulness. The funeral took place on Wednes day afternoon at 1 o'clock from the residence. BROWNE IN PHILADELPHIA. The Commonwealer has Trouble with the Police.

Carl Browns is in Philadelphia. The citizen has been having his own times with the police again, and The Ledger says: Undismayed by the fact that he was driven away by the police while attempting to address a crowd at Thirteenth street and Girard avenue, Friday evening, Carl Browne, lieutenant to Commander Coxey, of the defunct Commonweal army, made another attempt Saturday night to express his views. ple, and met with better success than on the preceding evening, although it is perintendent Linden before he holds anv more óitéil air meetings.

Saturday afternoon, Browne, accompanied by Jesse Coxey, called on the superintendent, much grieved over the police interference which had broken up his meeting. He wanted perimission to speak, and the superintendent informed him that as long as the crowd did not block the sidewalk he could hold his meetings. He might, the superintendent said, under the same conditions address the people in front of City hall. Browne was not slow to take advantage of the permission accorded him and in the evening General Coxey's trap, which contained in addition to Lieutenant Browne, Mrs. Coxey, and little Legal Tender Coxey, Miss Mamie Coxey and Miss Lilly Jones, Mrs. Coxey's sister, drew up at Thirteenth street and Girard avenue. In a short while a crowd gathered and just as Browne began to speak Sergeant Jeffries, of the Tenth and Thompson streets station, informed to move on.

Browne did not stay to argue the question of privilege, but proceeded in the trap to City hall. There he met with better luck. His speech had been finished, and he had begun to sell books containing General Coxey's panacea for hard times when he was again ordered to move on by a policeman who had received his instructions direct from the superintendent. This time Browne lingered a while, and this brought the policeman back the second time with a command that would brook no denial. Sadly Browne packed up his books and the party departed much dissatisfied with their treatment.

THE TENNIS PLAYERS.

They Expect and Will Welcome Another Irish Invasion.

THREE GREAT EXPERTS MAY COME

Goodbody May Cross the Atlantic to Measure Strength With Wrenn, Larned and Other Clever Americans.

The southern championships in Baltimore May 21 mark the opening of the tennis sensor of 1895, and there is every prospect that the year will be a great one on the courts. The visit last season of Goodbody, the Irish expert lawn tennis player. has done more to infuse new life into the sport on this side of the ocean than any previous event in many years. The doubt-and held by Robert D. Wrenn.] ful reputation of American experts abroad caused by the repeated failures of our players on English courts has been materially raised by the reception the foreign "crack" received here last season, and already the authorities on the other side of the briny deep display a profound though newborn respect for the skill of our most expert tennis players.

NEWPORT CHALLENGE CUP. [Representing the championship of America

In comparing American and English players Goodbody said before leaving America last fall: "I think that perhaps our players certainly one or two of them -are better than those on this side, but although I know we have an idea that there is a wide difference between the tennis in the two countries I consider this quite a mistake, and any of our players who thinks he can come over here and car ry all before him will very soon find that he has quite underrated the capabilities of the best exponents of the game here."

This is perhaps the fairest criticism American players have yet received from an English authority, and Goodbody is an authority, standing as he does high up in the tennis world abroad. Goodbody's visit last year pointed strongly to a number of faults in the play of the leading American players, and they have profited by the lesson. He has promised to come again this summer, and before another season has rolled by, and its tennis battles have become part of history, we shall probably have had the chance of again testing the comparative skill of the players in the two Goodbody will probably play in the English championship in July before he comes to this country, so we should not expect him before the last of July. From the Longwood tournament, however, to the championship at Newport he is expected to play in the biggest event each week, and a score of the eleverest players America can produce will be ready to do battle with him. But it is possible they may find more than one foreigner to oppose them, for our last year's visitor promised to urge some of the other English experts to make the trip with him this year and play for the American championship as well as in the last few preliminary tournaments before Newport. Nothing definite has yet been learned of the plans of the foreigners, though the names of J. Pim, the champion of all England, and H. S. Mahoney, ex-champion of Ireland, have been mentioned as possible visitors with Good-

'Come one, come all," however, is the motto of American experts, who will be better pleased the more visitors they can entertain, and all are right sure of a hearty welcome to these shores. The National Lawn Tennis association's rules permit only members of recognized American ciubs to play for the championship, but exceptions are always made in favor of foreign visitors, to whom special invita-tions will be at once extended. The presence of English experts lends an air of international importance to our championship meeting, and each defeat the American "cracks" receive at the hands of a foreigner teaches them some much needed lessons in the sport Those administered by Goodbody last summer have been the most valuable received in many years.

America is well prepared to meet any foreign invasion of our tennis arena this season. Of the first ten players of the land, according to the official estimate, every one will be in active competition again this season. In fact, there will be only one or two of the first 20 players in retirement, and among those a little further down in the list are many who may develop championship form long before 1895 is buried and forgotten. Champion Robert Wrenn, who alone stood between Goodbody and our champtonship last August, will be seen this season even more than last. He is studying at Harvard, but will not be free for tennis before the end of June, as he is playing second base for the Harvard baseball team

The doughty little champion will be at Newport again next August ready to defend his title against all comers, while he will also play at Chlcago for the championship of the west in July The constantly increasing number of invitation tournaments given each season in this country makes it more probable that Wrenn will play often before Newport, for precedept is against the champion's entering many of the ordinary open tournaments. We may expect to see Wrenn this year at West Newton, Chicago, Long Branch, Narragansett Pier, and perhaps Longwood before the championship, and this should give him enough practice for the supreme test of the season

Of the other experts, the chances of William A Larned of Summit, N. J., who came so near defeating Goodbody last August at Newport, are perhaps the brightest this season Larned is a most brilliant though erratic player, and the best judges agree that he has wonderful tennis capabilities. It is only a few years since be was a second class player, and his rise has been very rapid. He is still young -younger than most of the other cracks.

in fact—and is is doubtful if he has yet reached the south of his tennis fame. Another year's experience ought to put him on the very apex of the heap, if indeed he does not get there this summer. He is the strongest player among the few who might win the championship this season by defeating Wrenn. He expects to play in almost all of the biggest events this season, and as he already holds the middle states and the Long Island championships as well as the Longwood and Seabright challenge bowls he will be in almost constant competition. Fred Hovey has started in this season with the same old determination to retire, but few of his friends believe he will live up to it. Hovey is practicing law now in Boston, and he declares that he will give up his first love for his second. He said the same thing last spring, however, and yet he played in almost as many tournsnents as the year before The temptation of the tennis court is too strong for him, and we may expect to see Hovey in har-ness again this year. He has been ranked high up among the first ten players of the country for many successive years, but he invariably fails to reach the highest rank. He holds the doubles championship of America with Clarence Hobart, as well as the Massachusetts state champion-hip, so he will have to keep in good form for these events, while at Longwood, West Newton and one or two other New England tournaments he is always to be found playing. Malcolm Chace, Arthur E Foote and John Howland, three Yale men will all be seen again this season on the courts. Chace and Foote will play in all the most important events, while Howland had enough success last season to lure him on

With Poote, Howland won a number of very important tournaments in doubles. and this combination will probably be in the field again this year. Chace is among enough to attract for him quite a following of admirers. Clarence Hobert and Richard Stevens, wo other old timers, will be active again his season. Hobort, who was ranked sixth last season, was one of the three men who had Goodbody all bearen at Newport, but who, like the others, fell a victim to the Irishman's wonderful steadiness. He lities of their fellow men. They were lost two or three important challenge cup marches earlier in the season, but succeeded in holding the doubles championship of the country with Hovey. He will remain in condition and play again this year to defend this title and the New York state championship. As he is in business he will not be able to play throughout the entire season, but will find time to contest at Newport as usual for the championship. Stevens will be seen again this season in all the big tournaments played on grass courts. He has sworn a solemn oath that he will not play on earth courts, and he espects his vow. Stevens has played the same consistent base line game for the last four or five years and always about as well He has several times seemed to be a formidable candidate for championship honors, but has always disappointed his friends. It is doubtful if the style of his play is capable of much if any more improvement, and the strong net players generally succeed in downing him. It is possible, however, that he may reform and learn to volley, in which case he would become one of the most formidable players in the land. He was ranked seventh last year and has been in the first ten almost every year for the last four or five.

There are besides those mentioned a counger generation of experts in W. Gordon Farker of New York, Clarence R. Budlong of Providence and Stephen C. Millett and Edwin P. Fischer, both of New York, by whom championship form may be reached this season. All were ranked in the first 20 last fall and two of them in the first ten. Fischer is perhaps the most promising of this lot, and with a little more experience he will take a lot of beating from any of the cracks before he acknowledges himself defeated.

To this list of experts should be added a host of younger and even more ambitious players, from whose ranks the champions of years to come must be developed. With such a wealth of material at hand to choose from there could not be a better year for us to meet formidable visitors than in 1895. The foreigners will be welcomed with open arms, but I for one believe that they will return to their native shores again in the fall without the chailenge cup which represents the champion-ship of America. Facts About the Defender.

C. Oliver Iselin, one of the owners of the new cup defender Defender, says that she is an out and out keel boat; that her beam is a little less than the Colonia's and her draft considerably more; that she is manganese bronze below the water line and aluminium above; that she will have the best suit of sails which money can buy and the skill of sailmakers produce and that she will practically have four suits of sails, from which will be selected the ones which prove best in the preliminary racing.

She is not far from 126 feet over all and certainly not under 89 feet water line nor over the 90 foot limit. She is an out and out keel boot, an improvement of the Colonia model in ways downed necessary from past experience, and has no centerboard, auxiliary or otherwise, as some newspapers have declared Mr. Iselin believes the Defender will be from five to seven minutes faster than the Vigilant.

Hundred Good Judges of Human Noture Selected to Pick Out the Foremost Men In New York-Chauncey M. Depew, T. C. Piatt, Henry Clews and Col. McCall.

[Special Correspondence.] NEW YORK, May 6. - Who is the most brainy among the well known men in

I have heard that query frequently ropounded, and I have never heard a satisfactory answer given. In almost any state outside of the imperial one, not to speak of a municipality, the problem would be easy of solution. But the great metropolis of the new world is the Meoca toward which the eyes of the adventurous and the ambitious are constantly set. The bold, the brainy and the brave men from every section of the state, the nation and even of the globe come here in search of fame and fortune. And of all the possible champions of 1895, and some the great men of Gotham who now fill of his matches last year were brilliant the public eye not one is a born New

I have interviewed 100 people during the past formight with a view of ascertaining if possible who is New York's bramiest man. I selected the best judges of human nature, men who should be able to gauge pretty accurately the abilnewspaper men, lawyers, politicians, bankers, brokers and bonifaces. There was a great diversity of opinion, and the hundred talesmen selected something like 25 candidates. Senator David B. Hill was not balloted for, as he is an up Yorker. Here are the nominations: points in the testimony. There was the country man and not a resident New Chauncey M. Depew, John A. McCall, Thomas C. Platt, Joseph H. Choate, William C. A Brilliant Quartet. Four candidates led all the rest by a decisive majority. Strange to say, each had 12 votes-48 out of a possible 100. This brilliant quartet were Chauncey M. Depew, statesman, orator, wit, lawyer and railroad magnate; John A. Me-Call, president of the New York Life Insurance company, litterateur, financier and great corporate organizer; Thomas C. Platt, greatest of living politicians and most successful of business men, and Henry Clews, keenest and most farsighted of Wall street bankers, author, politician (in the best sense of the word) and public spirited citizen. These four men came the nearest, in that they possessed the "genius which commands all the faculties." All of them, oddly enough, possess strong points in common-wit, wisdom, unflagging industry, executive ability and political sagacity. Channey M. Depew's name is a household word in every home in the land. His history is too well known to require review here. Dr. Depew is now president of the New York Central railroad and accounted one of the best lawyers in the land. But for his connection with the Vanderbilts and other corporate interests he certainly would have been elected United States senator twice and perhaps president of this great coun-

ANNA DICKINSON.

A Sad Commentary on the Mutability of Earthly Things. [Special Correspondence.]

SCRANTON, Pa., May 6.—It is sad to witness the decline of a great intellect, a noble life or a lofty purpose. If "the setting of a great hope is like the setting of the sun," surely the change of a destiny from the highest pinnacle of fame to the pitiful makeshift that might fill up the measure of the most commonplace existence is like the eternal darkness that shuts in a once bright day on which no morrow's sun will shine. To picture the woman who at 17 was termed the "glorious girl," the "woman of the century" and "the new Joan of Arc" as she was seen during the progress of the recent trial in which she has appeared as plaintiff would be to show a strong, earnest face, where indomitacould be read as over it flitted swift expressions of annovance, sarcastic amusement and furious rejection of certain same clear cut profile of 30 years ago; the same proud upper lip and firm chin were there, but the black curls that used to cluster about the girlish neck and white brow were closely clipped, and only a thick crop of iron gray hair was to be seen beneath the little brown hat. But the brilliant, flashing eyes were there, and the glow leaped into them as of old when the handsome lawyer of the opposition brought out some point relating to her alleged insanity. She made that young man exceedingly unhappy one day when she was supposed to be on the rack of cross examination. It was really the lawyer who was racked, for

At all periods of the trial she was still Anna Dickinson, erratic, to be sure, but whenever she took the stand a hush fell over the crowded courtroom and over the baffled throngs at the outer doors that had been vainly demanding effected by perspiration, and always admittance such as stilled to silence the look as if right out of the box. It was easy to see the plaintiff's power over the jury. They were not interested in the pathetic story of the gifted sister, Susan E. Dickinson, whose work as poet and writer is so well known. She is a tiny creature, and in the witness stand the small, worn face bore traces of her tollsome life, believed by many to have been largely spent in a species of servitude to her sister. But Susan Dickinson's tale of sacrifice and of danger and her sad little figure in its somber garb did not touch the gentlemen of the jury, who only roused up when the bell-like notes of Anna's voice rang out. When sobs choked her utterance in recounting her wrongs, the jury blinked its 24 eyes and began to hastily fumble for handkerchiefs. When her fierce and bitter sarcasm scored her sister and the friends who carried her to the insane asylum, the jury smiled significantly.

Many people can recall the days when as a girl she was feted and lauded and blessed as almost the savior of her land. It is only necessary to look over the press notices of the early sixties to be astonished at the influence she wrought upon those troublous times. In New York, in Boston and Philadelphia it was difficult to find words rich enough to tell of her successes. Speaking in the house of representatives at Washington, with such men as Schuyler Colfax and Hannibal Hamlin to introduce her, with such men as John Sherman, Thaddeus Stevens Charles Sumner, James A. Garfield and many others of illustrious memory to welcome her, and with Abraham Lincoln to admire and applaud in her audience, she created the maddest enthusi asm, while in the most critical period of the war it was openly admitted that her HARRIET CLAY PENMAN.

The long-prayed for rain began to fall in Massillon about 6 o'clock last night, and continued for an hour. The storm clouds seemed to mass themselves from every direction over the town and its western environs, and tilted until their contents ran out in torrents over the gaping fields, dry beds of streams and dusty roads. Fields soon became lakes, rivu- light it was not known whether it could lets rivers, and the Tuscarawas rose to be transferred to its destination over flood time proportions. GEORGE, R. GIBSON. The death of George R. Gibson is as sad an accident as has occurred in the history of the Wheeling & Lake Erie railway, and no death has been more keenly felt by the officials and employes. Mr. Gibson was held in the highest esteem by those with whom he was associated. By the road officials he was considered one of their most valuable and trusted assistants, although he has been connected with the company but two years and two months. MR. STOUT'S EXPERIENCE.

In conversation with an Independent representative, today, Superintendent Stout related fully his thrilling experience of last night. With the exception of Rodenberger and the enginemen, all who were dashed into the swollen stream were seated upon the engine tender. The locomotive was running backwards and the tender was the first to crash through the timbers of the bridge.

"Mr. Merwin, Mr. Gibson and myself," said Mr. Stout, "were seated as close together as possible on the extreme end of the tender. We went down together and that was the last that I saw of Mr. Gibson. I myself was held fast by wreckage under the locomotive for a time, so long in fact that I became convinced that there was no chance for my escape. The water poured over me in torrents, and twice I was forced under reach open water and then I secured a footing.

The United Mine Workers' Journal relates this incident: "The most dramatic scene in the late Ohio joint convention was witnessed during the speech of President Penna in reply to Operator Zerbe. Mr. Zerbe, himself, has the carriage and bearing of a thorough gentleman, and his address to the convention was heightened in its effect by his decorous attitude, and when he detailed his experience in trying to conciliate the two factions of Pittsburg operators, headed as they are by DeArmit and Robbins respectively, it was intensely interesting. Mr. Zerbe went on to relate how he had met Mr. Robbins and invited him to his hotel to dinner, and also how he had done the same to Mr. De- properties of Aluminum, to give Armit, and that after getting them face to face how he had said to Mr. DeArmit

New York, May 14.-Reports from many sections of the state indicate that the frost did an immense amount of damage to growing vegetables, crops Chautauqua grape belt was rained.

The loss is estimated at $1,500,000 in this belt. That figure was the value of last year's crop, and by reason of new acreage coming into bearing the crop this year would have been much larger. The Chantanqua grape belt extends through Eric county westward to Eric. It occupies a strip from five to eight miles in width along the southern shores of Lake Erie

The number of acres bearing grapes last year was 26,000. This year 35,000 acres would have been bearing. The vines were loaded with blossom buds, and now from one end of the belt to the other the vineyards are nothing but blackened ruins and have the appearance of having been visited by fire. Three thousand six hundred freight cars were loaded from the belt last season. The total number of baskets reached 10,800,000. To this number 3.000,000 might safely be added for increased acreage this year of West Virginia report that the frost was generally heavy and killing. Fruit is badly damaged, grapes being almost completely ruined. Corn, where far enough advanced, potatoes, beans, tomato plants and other spring crops suffered greatly. In many localities ice was formed. The thermometer was 35, though at some points it fell below 30. In the mountain districts it snowed considerable, freezing as it fell, the forest foliage being all frozen. These conditions principally prevailed in the western, central and southern portions of the state. East of the mountains, though the mercury was as low as freezing, no material damage was done by frost.

LEXINGTON, VA.-Fruitgrowers in the Shenandoah valley fear the frost has blasted the prospects of what would otherwise be the premium fruit crop of the valley for years. Reports from the country surrounding Roanoke say that the heavy frost was very destructive to the early vegetables. and it is feared that the fruit in Southwest Virginia is damaged. GRAND RAPIDS-The most reliable advices obtainable here indicate that so far fruit has not been materially injured in Western Michigan, but great anxiety is felt for its fate. The mercury stands at 33 degrees in a driving snowstorm from the northwest, which may send it down to 30 or 28 degrees A drop of a few degrees in temperature means a freeze that will certainly damage or entirely destroy all fruits except apples. In many sections nearly the grapes, apples, peaches, cherries and early garden vegetables were killed. The temperature fell below the freezing point and ice formed on still water.

CINCINNATI - Specials from verious points in Ohio indicate that the cold was the greatest and the frost most damaging on the Lake Erie slope; also that below the 40th parallel of latitude the damage was almost significant. In the northern half of the state, between the lake slope and the 40th parallel, serious camage was done to small fruits and to ver-tables, but the tree fruits were only -li, htly hurt.
